Finding Resources

As long as there have been people, we've tried to figure out why people do the things they do, and why they do them the way they do them! Now you have a chance to dig deeper into the human mind by researching some aspect of psychology.

If you want to find the most recent and reliable information, use the library databases.

Sometimes the way you word your search will change the results you receive. So, if you don't find information the first time, try thinking of another way of saying the same thing. Instead of just entering a string of words, try putting them in quotation marks. This tells the database that you want to see the words together, as a phrase. For any database, mark the Full Text box, if you want to see the entire article.

Search databases under Social & Behavioral Sciences, as well as Medicine & Health Sciences.

The following databases will be most helpful in researching psychological or mental health topics:

Diversity Studies: Find full text articles from magazines and peer reviewed journals.

Gender Studies: Does gender make a difference? Search full text articles to find the answers.

JSTOR: View thousands of articles from scholarly journals on a variety of topics.

MEDLINE(EBCO): Search for articles in the National Library of Medicine's files.

Psychology & Behavioral Sciences Collection: Search thousands of journal articles for information on your topic.

Psychology: Academic journals and magazines full of articles for research.

Accessing the Library Off-Campus

Books & Ebooks

Ebooks allow you to read books from your home computer or personal device.

Books can be found from the library's home page using the library's online catalog. Most of the books that can be checked out of the library are located on the second floor, in the main collection.

Many books are available in ebook form. While we may not have these books in print form, we do have them available in an electronic format that can be read from your computer screen.

First, find a book in the Library Catalog. To view an ebook, click where it says View eBook. You might need to click Full Text or Read Online. You may now read the book page by page.

Or, click Search within and enter terms to search. Click on a page in the results to go directly to that page.

Use the Cite feature to get your citation information.

Remember the Citations!

As your instructor will tell you, it is important to get all of the information you need to write your bibliography page. Make sure you have all the bibliographic information before you leave! It is much easier to get it the first time than it is to come back later and try to find the right book or documents.

To be sure you format your bibliography correctly, use:

The Little Seagull Handbook

Manual for Writers of Research Papers, Theses, and Dissertations: Chicago Style for Students and Researchers

MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers

Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association

If you have questions, ask your instructor.
